

Top Ten List

This simple concept can make a huge difference on your campus, as you and other Christian students pray for, reach out to, and share the Gospel with ten non-Christian friends each. As always, the motive for this must be love, because you care about them and want to see them come to know the Savior. Simply ask the Lord to give you wisdom about which 10 people He has put in your life--in classes, at work, where you live, where you play--who should make up your 'Top Ten' list (apologies to Letterman). If in doubt as to who you should include (or if you have a hard time choosing from among all of your non-Christian friends), always select the students who you would guess might have the greatest impact on others if they came to Christ. Of course, you can never predict the sort of impact anyone could make when empowered by the Holy Spirit, but if you know students who are 'movers and shakers' in the non-Christian world, it is safe to guess that the Lord could use those skills to make a great difference for His Kingdom as well...

Just jot down the names of the 10 people the Lord most wants you to focus on first as you trust Him to make a difference in your friends' lives.
